Verdict:

A creditable attempt to bring high style to audio's high brow, and largely very successful indeed.

Canton has style and substance

Canton's CD300-based system attempts to bring a shining silver beacon of style into the aesthetically challenged domain of high-end home cinema equipment.

It's both desirably styled and quite beautifully finished, and each all-aluminium cabinet is of an extraordinarily high standard. The fit and finish of these speakers takes your breath away. And there is technical substance to back up the style. The front speakers can go surprisingly low. The neat sub is powerful and articulate listen, too.
